Speakers:

Chiara De Vecchis, AIB Lazio

Participation is free and open to everyone. The seminar will be based on the experience of the Biblioteca Fabrizio Giovenale in Rome, which hosted the Bibliomakers Project starting on October 19, 2017. This is an area dedicated to the promotion of innovation and sharing with activities and making labs for primary school students, as well as families, professionals, institutes and local associations. The libraries are transformed into centres of creativity and sharing by developing a network that can accelerate innovation and where users can discover and learn to use digital manufacturing tools.

The subject line should read 'Bibliomakers' and please specify that you allow us to use your personal data for the event (Bill 30 June 2003, N. 196 and EU Regulation 2016/679 - GDPR).
