

A workshop for the jobs skills of the future for Fondazione Mondo Digitale

LOCATION
Rome, Italy

FOUNDED
2011

EMPLOYEES
25

Fondazione Mondo Digitale (FMD) is an Italian social enterprise that works to equip young people with the job skills required for a changing economy. With a $500,000 grant from Google.org, FMD was able to construct the “L’Officina dei Nuovi Lavori” – the workshop for new jobs – a facility near Rome that offers unemployed young people digital and maker skills using cutting-edge equipment. With Google.org’s help, FMD has built a visual animation studio, an interactive game development lab and a Maker Space equipped with gadgets like 3D printers and laser cutters. The facilities served 1,500 unemployed young people and 4,500 schoolchildren within two months of opening.

Google.org’s support has given Fondazione Mondo Digitale the opportunity to make a quantitative and qualitative leap in terms of both content and scope of activities. In particular it has enabled the Foundation to establish a uniquely innovative and meaningful programme for the unemployed youth of Italy.

Mirta Michilli, CEO, Fondazione Mondo Digitale