Grandparents on the Internet

/2010-/2012

Sardegna(Italy)

During the 2010/2011 academic year the Pasquale Tola Secondary School in Sassari (Italy) organised a series of computer literacy courses for grandparents, where the teachers were young students (11-13 years) willing to help their elders to learn some basic internet skills. The 12 academic hours training took four weeks.

The initiative was launched with 25 grandparents as students and the help of Fondazione Mondo Digitale. Some teachers also worked as volunteers.

As a commitment to the European Year of Active Ageing and Intergenerational Solidarity the school will continue the experience and celebrate two courses for grandparents in February and November of 2012
