'The Generation Games': connecting generations through sport

The Generation Games is an international event that brings together people of all ages to practice sports together. It is a multi-sports event that promotes exercise and a healthy lifestyle, connects people of all ages, and offers a platform to local and global organisations to encourage sports participation.

The first edition of the Generation Games took place in Rotterdam (NL) on 23 June 2012, the International Olympic Day. Many stakeholders contributed to the success of the event: sport clubs, national sport associations, the Dutch Olympic Committee, Dutch Sports Federations, schools, universities, companies and volunteers of all ages. This was also the opportunity to mark the European Year for Active Aging and Solidarity between Generations 2012.

The organisers of the first edition are now inviting every city, large or small, to organise the Generation Games. If interested, cities can receive the creative concept with guidelines, tips and advice in order to organise their own edition together with local partners.
